PREFACE.

The collection of which the majority of the books dealt with in the following pages originally formed a part, was presented to the Royal Society in January 1667 by Henry Howard (afterwards sixth Duke of Norfolk), whose grandfather, the Earl of Arundel, had purchased a great portion of it in Vienna during his embassy there in 1636. A number of the books so purchased are said to have come from the library formed at Buda by Matthias Corvinus, King of Hungary, after whose death they passed, in the last years of the fifteenth or early in the sixteenth century, into the possession of Bilibaldus Pirckheimer of Nuremberg, whose bookplate is affixed in many of them.

John Evelyn, in his "Diary," states that it was at his instigation that Henry Howard presented the collection to the Royal Society. "This gentleman," as Evelyn says, "had so little inclination to books, that it was the preservation of them from embezzlement." A further entry of Evelyn's, dated 29 August 1678, gives an account of his receipt of the collection on behalf of the Society. "I procured for our Society," he says, "besides printed books, near one hundred MSS., some in Greek of great concernment. The printed books being of the oldest impressions, are not the less valuable; I esteem them almost equal to MSS. . . . Many of these books had been presented by Popes, Cardinals, and great persons, to the Earls of Arundel and the Dukes of Norfolk; and the late magnificent Earl of Arundel bought a noble library in Germany, which is in this collection. I should not, for the honour I bear the family, have persuaded the Duke to part with these, had I not seen how negligent he was of them, suffering the priests and everybody to carry away and dispose of what they pleased; so that abundance of rare things are irrecoverably gone."

In 1830 the Royal Society, with a view to increasing the scientific resources of their library, disposed of the greater part of the MSS. in the collection to the Trustees of the British Museum.

The collection now catalogued consists of 396 volumes, comprising

981 works, many of the volumes containing a number of separate works. It is specially rich in tracts of the Reformation period; there are in the collection 144 separate works by Martin Luther, and a large number of tracts from other hands (such as those of Erasmus, Melanchthon and others) which have reference to Luther and to questions concerned with the Reformation.

The Society possesses, in a translation made into the Massachusetts Indian language from Richard Baxter's "A Call to the Unconverted," a book which (so far as can be ascertained) is unique. The translation is by John Eliot, an English minister who from 1646 to 1690 was engaged in missionary labours among the Massachusetts Indians. Of a thousand copies of this work that are known to have been printed at Cambridge, Mass., in 1664, no other example is known to exist, the fact of their disappearance being probably accounted for by their being printed for distribution among Eliot's Indian disciples and pupils. The Society's copy is in the original boards.

Another very rare work of Eliot's, which is in this collection, is his translation of the Bible into Massachusetts Indian. This was the first Bible printed on the American continent, and was issued at Cambridge, Mass., 1661–63.

The Society's copies of the second edition of Chaucer's "Canterbury Tales," printed by Caxton (1484?) and the edition printed by Pynson (1493?), are both imperfect. Only one perfect copy of the former is known, and only three of the latter. The copy of the Second Folio edition of Shakespeare's plays lacks the leaf with Ben Jonson's verses and two of the unnumbered leaves that should follow the title-page.

Among other rare works in the collection the following may be noted: Joannes Naso's "De Spectaculis a Panhormitanis in Aragonei regis laudem editis," of which only two other copies are known; the work of Hartmannus Schedel known as the "Nuremberg Chronicle" (1493); "Bartholomæus de proprietatibus rerum" (1495?), a fine specimen of Wynken de Worde's printing; a collection of 49 scarce Italian tracts, mostly ballads and poems printed at Venice early in the sixteenth century and illustrated with woodcuts; Pope Boniface VIII.'s "Liber Sextus Decretalium" (1465) and Cicero's "De Officiis" (1466), two books printed on vellum and finely illuminated, both from the press of Johannes Fust and Peter Gernsshem at Maintz.

Albrecht Dürer is represented by a volume containing three sets of biblical illustrations in woodcut: the "Epitome in Divae Parthenices Mariae Historiam," "Passio Domini," and "Apocalipsis."

The present catalogue is arranged under the names of the authors of the works, wherever it has been possible to ascertain them. Anonymous books are entered under the heading most convenient for reference, as well as (when possible) under their authors' names. Notes have been appended to the entries, mentioning any particular features that the individual copies may present—such as imperfections, or the presence of engravings, woodcuts, or the Pirckheimer bookplates. The letters B. L. and G. L., appended to certain entries, indicate that the books in question are printed in "Black Letter" or "Gothic Letter" respectively. The letters ED. PR., similarly used, indicate that a work is an Editio Princeps.

The preparation of the Catalogue was begun by Mr. Henry M. Mayhew, my colleague in the Department of Printed Books, British Museum. He unfortunately died after accomplishing about a third of the work; whereupon I undertook the completion of the catalogue, the revision of the whole, and the passing of the sheets through the press.
